Understanding Medical Evacuations in Hoedspruit

By law, provincial ambulances are only allowed to transfer patients to the closest medical facility.

In Hoedspruit, this would be Tintswalo in Acornhoek

In order to transport a patient to a PRIVATE hospital, you will need to call a private service over 90km away, with an average response time of over one hour.

Air evacuation is costly, limited to daylight hours and in majority of cases, needs to be warranted by severe injury, unconsciousness or by a medical practitioner on scene.

Understanding the challenges

Doctors are not always available after hours and the closest private hospital available to the public is Phalaborwa Clinix.

Most ambulances cannot access difficult terrain and are limited to good dirt or tar roads only.

Moving a patient in a private vehicle is risky and could cause further injury.

Consider the roads during the wet seasons!

Outside medical services may not know the area, terrain or challenges faced in the estate.

(house numbering, outlay of roads and houses not visible from the street)

This may add to the response time!
